

“What We Do” screenplay

By: Tron Anderson

Genre – Urban Drama

Freeway is released from Ft. Dix Federal Correctional Institution after serving a 36 month sentence for drug possession. Freeway has nothing on his mind but getting home to be with his soon to be Fiance, Niyah. Niyah has been barely keeping things together while Freeway was serving time. Freeway has two kids with Niyah, Mecca and Hakim. Freeway has promised to stay on the straight path not to be involved with anymore of the hustler lifestyle. Dawud, Freeways best friend and ex-partner, in crime has really made a name for himself while Freeway was away. This stick-up crew headed by Big Mac is threatening Dawud’s operation. Mac and his crew have all the hustlers in the city constantly looking over their shoulders. Things aren’t going that well for Freeway going the 9-5 route. Freeway’s boss is constantly on his back. It finally comes to a head when Freeway is late for work because his unreliable car breads down and his boss loud talks him in front of everyone. Tempers flare and Freeway tees off on his boss, mean while best friend, Dawud, is doing well in the streets, Freeway battles with his promise he made to his fiancé Niyah. News of Dawuds street successs has reched th ears of Mac and his crew. Dawuds is targeted and hit fatally. Dawuds crew now turns to Freeway for leadership and retaliation. The moral dilemma Freeway is faced with is his loyalty to his best friend of his loyalty to his kids and Niyah. The friendship wins this battle. Freeway organizes a plan to bring down Mac and his crew with help from other crews that have felt the wrath of Mac. One by one Macs crew members fall. Mac goes into hiding but the mean streets of Philly keep no secrets. Mac is found and tortured and the money that was found by Freeway and his crew was divided amongst the other crews that were hit, minus $800,000 in cash and product that was taken from Dawud.

This movie was inspired by Freeways hit single “Even though What We Do Is Wrong” featuring Jay-z and Beanie Sigel. This movie would feature the Multi Platinum artist now signed under Jay-z.